Highlights of the Week

Women in Tech Panel: Mentorship & Building A Support Network

Wed, Nov 8 / 5:00 p.m. - 6:30 p.m. / Computer Sciences 1240 / Register here
Join CDIS for an engaging evening of insights and discussions with six trailblazing women in technology: Sharon Li, Stevi Schanning, Josephine Ouma, Kim Phillip, Dawn Schreiner, and Jody McFarlane. You will have the opportunity to connect with other women in technology at the top of their fields from across the state of Wisconsin.

Finding mentors and building networks of support can help women in tech overcome challenges, develop skills, and gain inspiration in a male-dominated field. Hear panelists share their experiences and discover strategies and insights from emerging tech leaders.

UW-Madison’s chapter of ACM’s Women in Computing organization (WACM) is hosting its annual mentoring program!
This year-long program is targeted towards women & non-binary students who are looking to connect with others and learn more about Computer Science and technology within academia and industry.
WACM is currently looking for women & non-binary students who are interested in participating either as a mentee (Freshman/Sophomore-level undergraduates) or a mentor (graduate students, Junior/Senior-level undergraduates). Mentors will lead mentoring families with up to 3-4 mentees and engage with students through both organized and informal events throughout the year. Participants will have the flexibility to cater the experience to their group with the guidance of WACM and other mentors/mentees! Don’t worry if you’re unsure about which application to fill; WACM encourages you to apply to the one you align with the most, and you can always email them with any questions.

Why should you join the mentoring program
- Meet in a small group setting with peers just as fascinated with computing and tech as you are. Mentors will receive reimbursements for food/drinks purchased for meetups.
- Participate in mentoring program-only events — last year, we had events like succulent planting, cookie decorating, and a final picnic!
- Gain confidence and learn about how you can succeed

If you are interested in participating in the program as either a mentor or mentee, please fill out the form and WACM will reach out to you shortly with the finalized mentoring families!

The Challenger Series
Wed, Nov 8 / 11 AM / Memorial Union, TITU / Join the Canvas page to learn more
The McNair Scholars Program is excited to announce its new resource, the Challenger Series, which aims to provide information on graduate and professional programs. A representative from Rosalind Franklin University of Medicine and Science will discuss their various advanced degree programs, including Medicine, Podiatry, Physical Therapy, Physician Assistant, Pharmacy, and research-based Ph.D. programs.

Join the Challenger Series for their first session! They will be joined by Cindy Flores, M.Ed, the Assistant Director of Diversity Admissions at Rosalind Franklin University of Medicine and Science.

Rosalind Franklin University, located in Northern Chicago, offers 21 different Master’s, Doctoral, and PhD degrees in a number of health-related fields. Named after an extraordinary pioneer in science, RFU offers these programs across six (6) specialized schools!

Date: Wednesday Nov. 8th, 2023
Time: 11 am
Location: Memorial Union | Check T.I.T.U.

Snacks will be provided!

Art Business Competition

Proposals Due Thu, Dec 21 at 11:59 PM / Click here for more information

In partnership with the Bolz Center for Arts Administration, the Division of the Arts has opened another student funding opportunity for students, specifically for students with an entrepreneurial mind and an interest in the arts. The competition was created in 2009 to encourage UW–Madison students to develop and present a thorough proposal for an arts event, exhibition, performance, series, commercial venture or other artistic project.
